Losing Billy is the hardest thing we will do. To know him was to love him , he always told you he loved you. Billy's humor was unbelievable, he has been with us a long time but yet the days were short. It's hard to believe just last summer he was pressure washing a house for Christie and picking at us in the kitchen. Cancer made a residence in his brain and it never stopped. He had a will to live and he fought but God spoke and said it enough is enough. Now somehow thru our broken hearts and tears we have to say so long but it is hard. Our last Holiday watching him with the kids on Easter and how he wanted to be in the middle of what they doing. Our sister we will hold her heart in our hands, and somehow say so long to our Billy, for he was the love of her life and he knew how to get next to her, he loved her and his family. May God bless my sister and her kids, this is so hard, to let him go. I love you Christie and I will always be there for you. Prayers and love to the kids, love Sarah
