“ I've written about 30 different things since this was posted and I've deleted them all. There is nothing truly adequate to say when you are trying to tell someone you are sorry for their loss. Tim, I can't even begin to imagine how you are feeling. Please let me know if you need anything. Kris, I have a pretty good idea of how you're feeling. I have been there. Not precisely there, but somewhere painfully familiar. Now you have that unfair task of being stronger than you ever have because it's what Kayla would expect from you. Keep her in your heart and keep going. Sending all of our love,

“ I am so blessed to have not only known you but to have been your friend. Ever since freshman year no matter the amount of time passed, we could always call or text and we would always pick up right where we left off. Our last words were "ttyl, love you" Sadly later is on hold, but we will pick back up when I see you on the other side. I love you Kayla. You will always be in my heart. Rest easy ❤️

“ There are no words to express the loss of a child, I will never forget you Kayla you were full of life and never let anything or anyone get you down I will cherish the memories we all had when you lived in Maine with us and all the times I teased you about chewing tobacco and you always tried to get me to try it. Even though I didn't know you very long you still called me dad and you will always be considered my youngest daughter. Your mom and I loved you very much and always talked about you and Kristian all the time. RIP sweet girl and your mom and I will see you on the other side Love you Kayla.... Troy (Dad)

“ I remember going camping with the family. Kristian and I were inseparable just as my younger sister and Kayla were. I remember staying up and scaring them two on our trip. I remember the belly flops in the water and running from horseflies. You will definitely always be loved in our family Kayla Rose. We will manifest positive guidance on your journey.

Love,
