“ I remember walking up to Norman as we were standing in line to purchase tickets for a country music concert. I can't remember who the singer was, but I do remember I met for the first time one of my cousins. I looked at him and I just knew that he was related to me. He looked so much like his Uncle Colonel that I knew he was related to me. I walked up to him and said, excuse me sir, but are you related to the Colson or Craven family? He said I am a Craven, but my mother was a Colson. We connected the relationship to each other. We saw each other from time to time after that. He was a joy to know. Norman's mother, Mary, and my father, Coy, were first cousins. My father had pictures of Norman's Uncle Colonel and that is how I recognized him as being someone that I was related to, the family resemblance is strong. Rest in Peace, Norman. I know that you will be missed by many. Carol Colson Roach
