“ I am an a high school classmate and life-long friend who will deeply miss the man, and the boy, I knew as Dudley. Buchholz High School had their second graduating class in 1974. Dudley, like many classmates, went on to the University of Florida; but very few among the tens of thousands who call themselves the 'Gator Nation' became Gator football fans at a level anywhere near that of Mr. Rich Walker. From Orange and Blue trashcans and toilet seats to as some of suspect getting Steve Spurrier to South Carolina only to try and convince him to go back to Gainesville, Dudley was the ultimate Gator. He even scheduled knee surgery and home closings around Gator Football. I'm curious how many Saturday Open Houses were only agreed to if the house had a big screen TV and no one came during game time? I added a couple of photos primarily to show our Dudley up-front and cheering the Gators, but also because Dud would have wanted to show everyone the Gators at one point beat Georgia regularly. Okay, maybe it was almost 20 years ago, but to those of us who proudly call ourselves Hogtown Boys it was yesterday.

Savannah, thank you for having the courage to look through your Dad's phone and reach-out to those of us who will remember your Dad as the Gainesville Boy who was one of the biggest Gator fans ever! Rest in peace my friend, except of course during football season!

“ Dudley and I were roommates during college and remained friends thereafter. He was a super-special guy. Always happy and always making those around him happier. I admired his carefree spirit and how he also cared for others. I miss him already, as I am sure anyone reading this is as well. Rest in Peace my friend.
